Easter Tradition Of Blessing Of The Food

As in most European countries, the Easter Season in Poland is a time of great pageant and picturesque customs. Some of these, like the tradition of releasing convicted criminals from prison on Holy Thursday are no longer practiced, but the majority of the rest are still to be seen across the Polish countryside at Easter time.

Holy Saturday, begins the transition from the sorrow of Easter, reflective of the sufferings of the Passion and Crucifixion, to the joy of Easter, anticipating the Resurrection and Redemption.

Perhaps the first sign of this change is the traditional blessing of food. The table of a home would be filled with all sorts of food and delicacies to be eaten in the Easter feast.

Blessed Easter Fare on Holy Saturday, the food is blessed either at home or the Parish Church. At home the table is laid with finest linen and on it are spread ham, coils of sausage, cakes of all kinds, in the center of which is the homemade coffee cake, and homemade bread, colored eggs, salt and pepper, wine, vinegar and horseradish mixed with grated beetroot. In the center of the table is placed the Paschal Lamb made of butter. Sprigs of green decorate the plates upon which the food is placed on the edges of the table.

If the food is taken to a church, a little of each article of food mentioned above is placed in a small decorated basket. The basket is lined with a white napkin, and another napkin covers the food until the church is reached. Every housewife tries to make her basket look the prettiest by tying a decorative bow on the handle with a sprig of green or maybe a pretty little branch of pussy willows, or little flowers. The basket is carried to the church by the housewives or children.

Easter Day opens with Resurrection Mass. After the services in church, the family returns home and gathers around the table to eat their breakfast, consisting of the blessed fare. An egg is cut into as many pieces as there are persons present, with a few extra slices for guests who may drop in. Each person takes a piece of the “blessed egg” as it is passed by the head of the household, exchanging greetings of Happy Easter, and wishes for a long life and happiness.
